Lessons From the Last Downturn

Then: 2009
- 34% of law departments reduced staffing, while 70% increased work handled in-house.
- 12% of departments froze outside counsel rates, and another 51% asked for reductions.
- 11% of departments planned to use ALSPs to control costs.
- 50% of law departments implemented e-Billing tools, limiting visibility into spend.

Now: 2020+
- Over the past decade, law departments have significantly increased the size of their internal teams.
- Outside counsel will be asked to freeze rates for the foreseeable future—on addition departments may partner in different ways.
- The use of ALSPs will accelerate as departments seek lower, and more variable costs (80% currently using ALSPs).
- 11% of departments planned to use ALSPs to control costs.
- 50% of law departments implemented e-Billing tools, limiting visibility into spend.

Potential Revenue Impact for Law Firms

- ▲ 2% Decrease in total legal spending for the median F500 company from 2008 to 2009
- ▼ 6% Decrease in outside counsel spending for the median F500 company from 2008 to 2009
- ▼ $7.0B Impaired impact to aggregate AMLaw 200 Revenue based on 2019 Base of $118B

Practice Area Demand

- Increased Demand: Bankruptcy, Labor & Employment, International
- Decreased Demand: Mergers & Acquisitions, Real Estate, Intellectual Property

Depending on the macro impact by industry sector, aggregate demand + particular practice areas will have nuanced changes in demand.

Data sourced from HBR Law Department Survey – the leading source of benchmarking data on corporate law departments.

Executive Summary: Covid Vendor Strategies

- COVID-19 related challenges are significant to the legal sector in terms of both operational and economic impacts
- Firms need to proactively manage cash, target 2020 expense reductions, and evaluate longer term cost management
- Current experience indicates a willingness of vendors to accept price (or cash) concessions in exchange for business assurance
- HBR advocates a 4 step approach to managing these challenges:

1. Capture Quick Hits
   Identify immediate cash and expense management opportunities given changes in work/business environment

2. Plan for Uncertain Outcomes
   Understand vendor term flexibility and proactively identify broader expense management opportunities to support needs

3. Execute on Phased Plan Based on Need
   Pursue phased expense management program to counter current environment impact on firm financials

4. Align For Long Term
   Consider and address longer term transformational changes to achieve efficiencies and adjust to new operational environment
Overarching Strategy

OBJECTIVE: Proactively manage cash + identify/implement cost reductions of 5-10% of annual vendor spend incremental to business as usual (not including cash management/working capital)

BE TOUGH BUT COMPASSIONATE
Segment vendor base (e.g. private vs. public, financial health, etc.) and calibrate approach

CAPTURE QUICK HITS
Identify immediate near term opportunities to reduce cost and manage cash

TOP VENDOR REVIEW
Directly engage top vendors to achieve 10-20% cost reduction while reviewing incremental savings via service changes

NOT PREVIOUSLY SOURCED
Expand procurements involvement across all categories of spend focusing on those not centrally sourced

DEMAND MANAGEMENT
Create targeted opportunities to reduce costs via use restrictions, supplier consolidation, etc.

General Considerations

Vendor Working Capital
Peer Firm Trends
- Hard asset pause and/or extension
- Extend AP payments to 60 days
- Expand ghost card usage as key payment mechanism

Immediate Opportunities...
Identify + Communicate
- Address areas with reduce service requirements given temporary operational shift (e.g. labor, fixed costs, minimum commitments, etc.)
- Focus on large, well-capitalized (and recurring spend) providers (e.g. Williams Lea, AT&T, etc.)
- Review for price, demand and cash flow levers
- Engage vendors in services with increasing demand
- Expand review into “scarred cows” (e.g. Pharmacy) and right size / align for “new normal”
- Proactively engage in early renewals coming due in next 90-180 days
- Aggressive approach to CapEx negotiations (Servers, Laptops, etc.)

Operational Re-alignment
- Explore existing/legal service delivery models and internal vs. 3rd party partnerships with focus on non core functions opportunities
- Implement digitization strategies (e.g. bid/proforma review, library print, etc.)
- Identify areas of potential (new) spend in next 6-18 months and initiate dialogs
Key Frameworks: Segmentation & Demand

Step 1: Quick Hits – Cash Management

OBJECTIVE: Ideally maintain neutral or minimal changes in working capital needs.

Vendor Based
- Deferr lease payments – rent and other fixed asset expenses
- Update payment terms unilaterally for large vendors increasing terms by 30/45/60 days

Policy Based
- Review current payment terms and pay per terms
- Make payment terms timing from approved invoice vs invoice receipt

Process Based
- Increase use of p-cards and ghost cards to capture extended terms and rebates
- Centralize all AP decisions making/payments if not already centralized
Step 1: Quick Hits – Work from Home Fulfillment

OPPORTUNITY: HBR Group Purchasing Program can support employee productively working from home (WFH), while allowing firms to gain visibility and control spend

Office Depot GPP Agreement
- Free Access + Savings
  - Greater savings than you can get on your own
  - No cost to join
  - Pre-negotiated terms

Order Fulfillment
- Choose How to Pay
  - Can be direct bill or paid via credit card
  - No-fee shipping to employees’ homes
  - Next-day deliveries

You Choose Controls
- Multi-tiered approval process available
- Spend limits applied by user, role, etc.
- Pre approved work from home core list to consolidate purchases

Detailed Reports
- Access to comparative reporting and peer benchmarking
- Compliance tracking
- Product mix guidance/demand management support
Step 2: Plan for Uncertain Outcomes

Step 3 – Implement Program

Step 3 – Tracking Results
Step 4 – Long(er) Term Considerations…

Will the new normal require?
- Reduced need for office space?
- Changed expectations from internal and external clients?
- More virtualized work environment?
- Digital + Paperless environment?
- More extensive expense management?

Should you as a firm consider?
- Review non-core service delivery functions?
- Reconfiguring/downsize your real estate assets?
- Strategic review of technology and practice enablement efforts/budgets?
- Virtualize legal support services (legal assistance, paperless billing, etc.)?
- Category specific changes:
  - Reduce print from the library and office?
  - Reduce copier + printer fleet?
- Third party support for software + hardware maintenance?
- Consolidate commodity areas with preferred vendors?
- Fully centralize procurement and increase spend controls?
- Increase controls around non-billable travel?
- Reduced need for office space?
- Changed expectations from internal and external clients?
- More virtualized work environment?
- Digital + Paperless environment?
- More extensive expense management?

Discussion Goals - Recap

Discussion Goals
- Provide strategic framework and perspective
- Outline 4 step vendor approach
- Share specific examples firms are implementing

Key Takeaways
- Create framework for monthly run rate for revenue + expenses
- Engage your key vendors for both cash relief and cost savings
- Categorize vendor spend into fixed vs. variable costs, market demand, and practice support
- Push Accounts Payable payment terms 15 – 30 days
- Consider using ghost card
- Leverage benchmark data to gain scalability

How Centers of Excellence Are Accelerating Efficiencies Across the Legal Landscape
Introduction

Across today’s legal ecosystem, a set of complex forces has pushed law firms to strategically reexamine and transform operational support in a way that places a greater emphasis and value on corporate client-facing activities. Cost pressures, new competitors and emerging technology, and evolving workforce dynamics are influencing an industry that is now embracing change in different ways.

As the pace of change accelerates, organizations need to acutely define their core competencies and align business strategies, talent and resources to truly differentiate in a hypercompetitive market. For instance, general counsel (GCs) are finding great success in hiring legal operations leaders to implement and manage strategic initiatives to drive change and efficiency across structures, practice areas, technology and staffing. By transitioning work that had previously fallen on the shoulders of the GC to legal operations professionals, GCs are able to focus on core competencies, act as business advisors to the corporate board and provide even greater counsel to their organizations.

Similarly, law firms are increasingly using business professionals to lead and sponsor initiatives and provide diversity of perspective. By acknowledging that there are benefits to bringing in accomplished business professionals from other industries to transform processes and implement technologies, firms are able to free up attorneys to focus more on clients. Furthermore, given the rise in alternatives to outside counsel, law firms must demonstrate differentiation and provide centers of excellence (CoEs) beyond what corporate law departments can deliver in-house.

Shifting corporate client demands are challenging law firms to further define their core competency – the business of law – and leverage operational experts and CoEs to deliver their services in the most efficient and cost-effective way possible.

Forward-thinking law firms and law departments are now looking beyond internal staffing and cost-reduction strategies and are pursuing strategic opportunities utilizing outside experts to manage those services that fall outside of their core capabilities. This enables organizations to focus on what matters most: their clients.

CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE

Centers of excellence are teams of experts that provide leadership, research, insight and best practices for a business focus area. A CoE delivers enhanced service at lower costs than traditional business models, and offers a scalable and nimble approach to changing market and business conditions.
Operational Efficiency is a Top Priority

Across the legal vertical, these are the forces that have and will continue to instigate a long-term drive towards change:

- Pricing + cost pressures. As law departments face mounting pressure to trim costs and mitigate risk, work previously assigned to law firms is transitioning back in house. This has resulted in law departments’ outside counsel spending decreasing, while inside spending has gone up. In fact, 52% of in-house teams added law department staff in 2018, compared to 44% in the prior year, according to our latest HBR Law Department Survey.² For in-house teams, this presents a new challenge: to ensure in-house attorneys make the most efficient use of their time on higher value-add and complex work rather than lower value administrative tasks. For law firms, the pressure is on to provide more competitive or alternative fee arrangements to demonstrate and justify the value of their services to corporate clients. In pursuit of efficiency, leading firms are now evolving their service delivery models to capture the complexity of a matter and identify lower-tiered work. This allows firms to ensure staffing strategies align with the value of matters.

- Emerging competitors. Law firms face a radically different competitive landscape than they did even three years ago. With law departments taking steps to minimize outside counsel spending, one of law firms’ most consistent revenue sources is now fraught with uncertainty. At the same time, the New Law era has given rise to a host of third-party legal service providers, technology and software vendors. Major players from the likes of Axiom to Watson are infiltrating law firm territory, offering specialized expertise in areas like discovery, M&A and contracts — not to mention more flexible and appealing work arrangements for practicing attorneys.³ Another potential threat to law firms is the Big Four — the world’s largest public accounting and auditing firms, which The American Lawyer described in a November 2018 feature story as an “existential threat” to law firms, and questioned whether they may be planning “an invasion” of the U.S. legal market.⁴ And as corporate law departments continue to embrace and adopt alternative service providers and technology, pressure will continue to increase for outside counsel.

- The war for talent. Acute competition across the legal vertical is also responsible for upending many organizations’ compensation and recruitment traditions. Although law school enrollment finally rose in 2018,⁵ the decade of flat enrollment has created increased competition for talent. In addition, more law firm partners are nearing retirement. The result is that organizations face multiple questions about how to recruit, develop, compensate, retain and succession plan for their top performers, and competition for talent will likely increase in the future. Gone are the days where law firms are strictly competing with corporate law departments for talent pools. The new reality includes law firms, law departments, legal process outsourcing (LPO) providers, the “Big Four” and technology companies all competing for legal talent. Taking a page from Silicon Valley, many organizations are pursuing lawyers with niche expertise and established client relationships to elevate their reputation and revenue with the hopes of simultaneously increasing talent retention.⁶
In 2018, more U.S.-based partners left the partnerships of the nation’s top 100 law firms than in any year since 2013, despite historically being deemed taboo. Faced with budget constraints and hiring freezes, law departments are shaking up their talent strategies, creating new roles for legal operations professionals and expanding their management responsibilities. Law departments are also increasingly focused on diversity — both in terms of internal staffing and outside counsel staffing requirements. This is a trend that is anticipated to greatly influence law firm staffing models, and firms that are not focusing on diversity now will be at risk of losing client business in the future.

No law firm or law department is immune to the market’s evolution. Even the most elite firms, whose profitability has isolated them from certain competitive pressures in the past, are now exploring alternative approaches to established business functions. Leaders — even those at organizations that have been insulated from the impact of market change — acknowledge that if they do not pursue operational efficiencies now, they run the risk of losing market share in the future.

Opportunities in Centralizing, Offshoring + Outsourcing

For law firms, back-office centralization, which has been proven to optimize costs by 5-15%, has become a common practice for organizations looking to streamline operations and cut costs. Centralization often comes down to two options: offshoring or establishing roots in new, low-cost domestic markets. Large global law firms have fully embraced offshoring, particularly in Europe. Organizations including Baker McKenzie, Latham & Watkins and Linklaters have opened shared services hubs abroad to manage everything from IT, marketing and HR to finance and business development.

In 2016, United Kingdom and Washington, D.C.-based Hogan Lovells announced plans to establish a global business center in Louisville, Kentucky. The service center includes traditional service occupations, such as finance and accounting personnel, human resources and information technology professionals, along with staff attorneys and paralegals. The center is being integrated with another low-cost center that the firm has in Johannesburg, South Africa, enabling around-the-clock coverage for many of its services. Scott Green, Hogan Lovells’ Global Chief Operating and Financial Officer stated that “...this approach to how we deliver our business services is innovative, pragmatic and strategically sensible in light of market and client expectations. Many of Hogan Lovells’ peers have followed similar paths, including WilmerHale, Littler and White & Case, saving up to 30% on labor and 40% on real estate expenses as a result.9

In 2018, Baker McKenzie announced plans to add a legal services center in Tampa, “complementing existing back-office operations in Northern Ireland and the Philippines,” according to The American Lawyer.11 The firm expects to have 300 employees on-site by the time the center is fully operational in 2020.

For corporate law departments, outsourcing has long been viewed as a viable way to free up attorneys’ time and minimize costs. As law departments mature and bring on legal operations professionals, many realize they no longer need to handle every aspect of contract review, research or document management in house. HBR’s 2018 Law Department Survey indicates a shrinking portion of work going to law firms and an increasing amount being brought in-house or to non-law firm providers. Between 2015 and 2018, law firms’ share of law departments’ spend went from 55% to 49%, while the in-house share increased from 43% to 44% and the non-law firm share from 2% to 6% in the same period.12

Over the last decade, shared services models and process outsourcing have become standards in many other industries for streamlining operational activities and augmenting employee productivity. In healthcare, for instance, in the face of tight margins, higher expectations for patient care and complex regulatory compliance, healthcare organizations have outsourced functions ranging from complex claims processing and research to IT management.

Leaders that have tested these strategies are quickly realizing the benefit of working with external service providers and experts. Leading organizations are now building upon this approach, examining their operations, and identifying alternative service delivery models to amplify efficiency, increase cost-saving benefits, and align and utilize resources more effectively.
Summary

For the foreseeable future, the only constant in the legal vertical to bet on is change — and all organizations should be prepared.

By empowering leaders to streamline or outsource administrative functions, innovative organizations are benefiting from increased efficiencies and agility and are better equipped to handle rapidly changing business and client environments. By reducing the number of service providers and leveraging technology-enabled solutions, organizations are achieving optimal buying power and reducing third-party risk. With operational roadblocks cleared, organizations are able to focus their talent on creating additional opportunities to engage, develop and retain clients.

As the pace of change accelerates across the industry, leaders are finding that by making their back office someone else's front office, they are able to better align business strategies, talent and resources to achieve a competitive advantage. Those organizations that are taking immediate action are benefiting from transformation and controlling their future destiny by setting a new bar for the industry.

| Procurement (Easy-Medium)    | Managing third-party supplier relationships is complex, requiring a specific skill set that typically does not reside in most law firms. In many firms, procurement is a cost center versus a profit center that is fully aligned with the firm’s overall objectives. Leading firms are looking to managed services providers to unlock this untapped value. | • Guaranteed ROI and service level monitoring
• Agile staffing model and departmental flexibility
• Access to competitive market intelligence and subject matter experts
• Third-party risk mitigation and operational efficiencies |
| Research + Information Services (Easy-Medium) | The law firm library presents tremendous opportunities and challenges. Highly targeted information is increasingly required by firms to compete for new business, as well as retain and grow existing clients. Modern library services integrate with competitive intelligence, marketing and business development initiatives, and support specialized practice groups and individual attorneys. Traditional libraries’ budgets are under siege and have limited capacity to meet evolving internal and external stakeholder demands. | • Holistic and harmonized approach to research services
• Coordinated and fully integrated service delivery
• Increases efficiencies and utilization of the firm’s information resources
• Cost reduction and substantial purchasing improvements
• Minimizes transactional responsibilities for the library |
| IT (Medium) | Regardless of size, most firms face the same technology demands, regulatory pressure and client service expectations. As competition intensifies, law firms are challenged to keep pace with the evolution of technology, while addressing end users’ and clients’ expanding IT needs. In the battle to balance service offerings with budget, staff and skillset, leading firms are partnering with third-party providers to achieve optimal balance around IT cost, risk, security and service levels. | • Increases efficiencies and service level while mitigating risk
• Reduces and/or eliminates major capital investments
• Increases responsiveness, service stability, reliability and recoverability
• Provides cost predictability and increased value of spend for higher-quality service
• Nimble approach for faster response to changing market and business conditions |

| Finance (Medium-Hard)    | Given corporate clients’ increasingly stringent and complex billing arrangement criteria, law firm finance departments struggle to identify and avoid short pays for non-compliant billing. Finance (e.g., accounts payable, billing and collections), and specifically billing, is becoming a growing pain point for firms that have legacy staff that predate e-Billing or AFAs. Turning to a managed service provider with expertly trained staff can provide necessary relief. | • Transfers delivery risk associated with billing to third-party provider
• Agile staffing model and departmental flexibility
• Reduces overall investment and ongoing operating costs
• Delivers service to attorneys and law firm’s clients in a coordinated and fully integrated fashion from billing through collections |

| Client Matter Lifecycle (Hard) | Managing departments and processes along all avenues of the client matter lifecycle (e.g., new business intake process through the gathering of client feedback at the end of the matter) requires specialized skill sets in various departments, including legal support, new business intake and conflicts, billing and collections, and records. Due to the difficulty of recruiting skilled candidates to fill these positions, many firms are looking to managed services providers to streamline processes and increase efficiencies in legal support. | • Geography-agnostic talent pool to lead and manage teams
• Creates a stable team environment
• Consistent and efficient processes
• Transfers risk associated with legal support to third-party provider |

| Invoice Review (Easy)        | As law departments grapple with growing legal demand, attorneys must juggle significant competing priorities. By leveraging managed service providers to assist with invoice review, law departments allow attorneys to remain focused on higher value tasks. | • Provides a more consistent, comprehensive review process
• Leverages dedicated resources to ensure potential savings are captured and non-compliant billing is addressed
• Ensures billing guidelines are consistently enforced
• Increases the reliability of data analytics and more thorough invoice review procedures |
| Contracts (Easy-Medium)      | Contracts are the lifeblood of any organization and continue to be an area requiring significant legal resources.
Many law departments are looking to centralize contracting processes through centers of excellence/shared services, and some have chosen to outsource specific contracts and types of functions to a managed service provider. | • Centralizes contract lifecycle management — from request processing/intake and triage, to drafting and escalation, as well as review, approval, execution and obligation management
• Improved cycle times, consistency and increased compliance |
| Legal Operations (Medium)    | With the expectation that law departments exercise high levels of financial and operational discipline, more companies recognize the value of investing in a legal operations function.
Given law departments’ struggle to add new headcount, many are contracting legal operations providers to supplement existing teams. | • Provides tools and templates to support departments’ needs
• Scalability to match demand without the fixed cost of additional headcount
• Best practices are applied through all departments
• Provides consistent output of key operational deliverables, metrics and reports

<td>Discovery (Medium-Hard)</td>
<td>The time and cost associated with e-Discovery continues to grow with the proliferation of email and associated documents. Though law departments once performed the time- and labor-intensive task of document review, service providers are now the norm, offering dedicated review teams in lower cost locations to drive cost savings. Technology has also become a more prevalent part of the process, with machine learning and natural language processing technology maximizing efficiency and minimizing expenses.</td>

Introduction

The COVID-19 virus is challenging law firms, in terms of both health and economic impacts. With the support of their procurement functions, however, firms can navigate the supply chain issues they face in the immediate environment, as well as prepare for ongoing expense management as the legal industry emerges from the current situation.

First, the good news: in several ways, the legal sector is better situated than many. Legal professionals have a lower risk of virus exposure than many other professionals, according to the New York Times; law firms have a relatively evolved remote working environment, to facilitate a firm-wide work-from-home mode; and firms’ supply chain is mostly regional or local, with limited critical items.

Nevertheless, the current and future challenges are very real. HBR advocates a three-step approach for law firms and their procurement teams managing their supply chains and expenses in the new environment:

• Step 1 - Align with the firm’s immediate needs, including work-from-home
• Step 2 - Understand vendor terms and flexibility; proactively identify expense management opportunities to support potential firm needs
• Step 3 - Implement an expense management program to proactively counter an anticipated business downturn

Following are guidelines related to each of those steps.

It is important for all firm responses to be aligned in order to achieve the best outcome.
Align With Immediate Firm Needs and Work-From-Home Environment

The first step, of course, is to address immediate needs, including those related to a fully remote workforce. The current situation requires the entire firm to adapt to a new way of working. To most successfully support this new environment, procurement must (1) ensure that it is aligned with the firm’s overall strategy and planning and (2) determine how it can best meet the firm’s specific immediate needs and work-from-home environment.

Alignment With Firm Strategy and Planning

When sudden change occurs, there can be a tendency to react immediately on a one-off basis. It is important, however, for all firm responses to be aligned in order to achieve the best outcome. The procurement team should therefore make sure its efforts are aligned with the firm’s immediate direction and priorities. Following are three questions procurement leaders should ask themselves at the outset:

- Have you connected with your firm’s business continuity leader and aligned on the firm’s overall response to COVID-19?
- Have you connected with key leadership (CIO, CFO, CAO, COO, etc.) to get their views and offer assistance?
- Do you have clear direction on your priorities and a mechanism to report on progress?

Supporting Immediate Needs

With an understanding of priorities, the procurement function can work on adapting its efforts to the new way of working. Following are some sample questions procurement leaders should ask themselves to ensure they are supporting the firm’s immediate needs and new work-from-home environment:

- Have you helped procure the necessary equipment and services for the remote workforce, e.g., more laptops, IT peripherals, telco bandwidth, RSA tokens?
- Have you help expand any audio/video conferencing services?
- Have you helped establish or update your firms employee notification service?
- Do you have home address information for all employees, as well as the ability to dropship?
- Do you have a plan for eliminating the need for paper in procurement transactions, for example, using an automated clearing house (ACH) instead of checks for payments, and electronic signature technology such as DocuSign instead of physical contracts?
- Have you helped procure hand sanitizer, gloves, or other preventive/protective gear for those firm employees who must leave their homes to perform their work?
Step 2: Understand Contract Flexibility

Once the firm’s immediate needs for the new environment have been considered, the next step is to review key near-term agreements to understand what flexibility, if any, they have, and to prepare for ongoing needs in the new environment.

Two critical components of this second step include (1) evaluating the flexibility of key agreements that impact the immediate working environment, and (2) monitoring current expenses to identify the necessary adjustments.

Flexibility of Key Agreements

The COVID-19 virus and the new work-from-home environment will affect a number of services for which agreements are in place. Events need to be canceled or postponed, services at the office will become unnecessary or need to change, and more. Review the terms and conditions of those agreements to understand the level of flexibility for each.

Following are examples of some of law firms’ key contracts that may be affected by the current situation:

- Upcoming events
- In-process construction
- Food services and catering
- Travel agency
- Facilities-related agreements, e.g., janitorial, plants, landscaping, pest control, coffee, etc.
- Messenger, mailroom and document production
- Gym and child care
- Administrative support, e.g., reception, security, conference services
- Printer/copier leases and maintenance
- Medical services
- Other outsourced services
Monitoring and Adjusting Expenses

In addition to reviewing contracts, the firm and its procurement function should monitor current expenses and make specific adjustments that will help address its needs in the new environment. Following are a few areas of expenses to consider monitoring for necessary adjustments:

- Updated sourcing and negotiation. Are there categories of spend that have not recently been strategically sourced or negotiated? If so, take a look at what new sourcing strategies or re-negotiations you can undertake.

- Product substitutions. Create a list of products and services that could replace higher-cost (or unavailable) items.

- Demand reduction. Based on updates to firm guidelines (see Step 1 above), create a prioritized list of areas where demand could be reduced. (See Step 3 below.)

- “Low-hanging fruit.” Identify and make a list of services and products where immediate expense adjustments can be made.

The COVID-19 virus and the new work-from-home environment will affect a number of services for which agreements are in place.
Step 3: Implement an Expense Management Program

Some level of economic downturn is inevitable in the aftermath of COVID-19, so it is important for firms to focus on managing their expenses in the longer term. Once the firm’s immediate needs and priorities have been addressed, it is therefore time to develop and implement an ongoing expense management program, targeting recurring cost savings. The four major elements of such a program are contractual flexibility; demand management; increased centralization; and enhanced controllership.

Contractual Flexibility

Firms must understand the flexibility, or the constraints, contained in their existing third-party contracts, as well as negotiate as much flexibility as possible into new contracts going forward. Determining key terms to focus on and developing standard terms and conditions can help protect a firm during an economic downturn. Following are four key clauses:

- Termination for convenience.
  A termination for convenience clause permits early termination without penalty.

- Business downturn clause.
  A business downturn clause minimizes impact during a downturn by allowing for adjustments in usage or quantities and/or in amounts of spend.

- Payment terms.
  Longer payment terms allow for greater payment flexibility, thereby allowing better cash flow management.

- Term length.
  The desired term length depends on a variety of factors. A general rule of thumb is that a longer term is beneficial if the contract includes termination for convenience and/or business downturn clauses; otherwise, a shorter term is preferable.
Demand Management

Demand management involves planning for and managing the demand for products and services. Particularly in an economic downturn, it is important to evaluate opportunities for cost and service efficiencies through methods such as supplier consolidation (allowing a firm to leverage buying power and better manage service and product delivery) and changing the products or services used.

Some categories of law firm spending provide greater opportunities for demand management, depending on how critical they are to the firm’s ongoing business and operations. The illustration below depicts a continuum of opportunities for demand management, from areas where there is low opportunity (e.g., attorney bar dues, taxes, insurance) to areas where there is greater opportunity (e.g., events and parties, promotional products, etc.)

Increased Centralization

Increasing the centralization of activities and operations related to contract review, expense management and more will also help firms achieve recurring cost savings. Centralization aids efforts to standardize contract terms and conditions; allows a firm to leverage greater buying power through consolidation of purchasing across departments and offices; and can also help make the best use of a firm’s internal resources, potentially freeing team members for other work or, if necessary, reductions in force.
Enhanced Controllership

Finally, consistent enforcement of the firm’s expense management efforts is critical to maximizing their effect. Steps for enhanced controllership include implementing policies and procedures, incorporating proactive budget tracking, engaging in financial hygiene and controlling accounts payable to actively control costs.

- Policies and procedures. Create and implement comprehensive expense management policies and procedures, including how compliance is insured and tracked. Be sure to promulgate the new policies and procedures firmwide and educate employees on their meaning and impact.

- Budget tracking. If the firm does not already have such, implement proactive budget tracking, including a regimented process for how budget savings are captured and realized.

- Financial hygiene. Enhance the firm’s visibility into its projected liabilities; centralize the intake of firmwide invoices; and adjust the firm’s payment timing from daily or ongoing to a fixed cycle.

- Accounts payable controllership. Implement measures to control accounts payable, such as restricting the addition of new vendors; requiring that all spending over a specific threshold (e.g., $100,000) be sourced by the firm’s purchasing office; and requiring multiple levels of approval for spending over a specific threshold (e.g., $20,000).
Conclusion
There is no question that the current environment is challenging for law firms, as they work to adapt to the new working environment and plan for a likely economic downturn. Prioritization and planning relating to the firm’s sourcing and supply chain are critical, not only to meet the firm’s immediate supply and service needs, but also to ensure recurring cost savings. By aligning with the firm’s priorities and immediate needs, understanding the firm’s existing contractual flexibility, and implementing an ongoing expense management program, law firms and their procurement functions can understand and take control of their expenses to best support the firm’s ongoing operations in difficult times.
